

FOCO

THE PRINTABLE

ADHD Household Planner

Running a home with an ADHD brain. One zone at a time, no all-or-nothing, and no shame for the pile.

One zone a day

Bare-minimum mode

Zero shame

READ THIS FIRST

The 5 ADHD Home Rules

Most household planners assume you can hold the whole system in your head and keep it running. These rules are built for a brain that can't, and that is the point.

1. ONE ZONE A DAY.

Not the whole house. One area, today. The rest of the home is not the task.

2. SET A TIMER. STOP WHEN IT RINGS.

10 or 15 minutes. This kills the "if I start I'll lose the whole day" fear.

3. GET IT OUT OF YOUR HEAD.

Your brain is for ideas, not storage. Dump the mental load on the pages built for it.

4. A BAD DAY HAS A BARE MINIMUM.

On a hard day, a full win is tiny, and that still counts. There's a whole card for it.

5. MISSED IT? SKIP IT.

No catch-up, no doubling up, no guilt. You start again today. Today is the only day that matters.

Calm beats frantic. Small and steady wins.

Running a home is bigger than ADHD. For the full family system, bills, calendar, and sharing the load with a partner, pair this with the general household guide at remindher.app/household-planning. This planner is the part ADHD makes hardest: actually doing it.

Start Here When the House Feels Impossible

When the whole house feels like too much and your brain shuts down, ignore the rest of this planner. Do only this.

You do not have to fix the house. You do not have to do it well. You only have to start the timer. That is the entire win.

THE 15-MINUTE HOME RESET

- ☐ Set a timer for 15 minutes. When it rings, you are allowed to stop and be done.
- ☐ Trash lap. One bag, one loop, obvious garbage only. Don't sort, just toss.
- ☐ Dishes to the sink. Carry every cup and plate over. Stacking counts. Washing is optional.
- ☐ One surface. Pick the single worst flat surface and clear just that one.
- ☐ One tiny admin thing. Send one text, or pay one bill. Too much today? Skip it, that's allowed.

Still stuck before step one? That's task initiation, not laziness. A FOCO session starts the timer with you so you're not doing it alone.

ONE ZONE A DAY

Your Week, One Zone a Day

The whole house in one day is the trap. One focus area per day instead. Miss one? It just rolls to Saturday. No spiral.

Mon	Kitchen	Counters, dishes, sink, one wipe of the stovetop.	~15 min	☐
Tue	Bathroom	Sink, toilet, mirror, swap the towels.	~15 min	☐
Wed	Laundry	Wash, dry, and put ONE load away. The last part counts most.	~15 min	☐
Thu	Floors + surfaces	Pick the one room that bugs you most. Just that one.	~15 min	☐
Fri	Life admin	One bill, one call, one email. The avoided stuff, time-boxed.	~15 min	☐
Sat	Catch-up / skip	Do a missed day, or do nothing. Both are allowed.		☐
Sun	Rest	Bare-minimum mode only. Your brain needs the off-day too.		☐

Blanks are fine. There is no streak to break here.

The Doom Pile Reset

The chair, the floordrobe, the everything-table. You don't clean it, you sort it. One pile, 15 minutes, four buckets.

The pile I'm tackling today:

🗑️ TRASH

Obvious garbage. Don't agonize over it, just bin it.

➔ BELONGS ELSEWHERE

One basket. Everything from another room goes in, deal with it later.

✓ BELONGS HERE

Put it where it actually lives, right now, while it's in your hand.

⏸ DECIDE LATER

One box, lid on. Write a date to revisit so it's not forever.

Set 15 minutes. Sort, don't clean. When it rings, whatever's left goes in the Decide-later box and you are done.

COMMON DOOM PILES, CIRCLE THE ONE YOU'RE STARTING WITH

The chair / floordrobe

The kitchen table

The junk drawer

The mail and paper spot

The car

The bag dump

The "to return" pile

The "belongs elsewhere" basket is not a new pile. Empty it by _____ so it doesn't quietly become next week's doom pile.

GET IT OUT OF YOUR HEAD

The Invisible List

The mental load is the stuff no one sees: the refill, the appointment, the form, the thing you keep almost forgetting. Dump it all here so your brain can stop holding it.

BRAIN DUMP, EVERYTHING ON YOUR MIND

Staring at the blank box? Try: refills · appointments · forms · that one email · a birthday or gift · the thing you keep almost forgetting.

NOW CIRCLE THE 3 THAT ACTUALLY MATTER THIS WEEK

☐

☐

☐

Your brain is for having ideas, not holding them. Written down means you're allowed to forget it.

THE STUFF WE AVOID MOST

Life Admin & Errands

Admin is the hardest ADHD task: boring, low-dopamine, easy to avoid until it becomes a crisis. Shrink each one to a single next step and do it in a focus session.

Calls & messages

e.g., dentist, doctor, that callback, the school, a reply you owe

☐

☐

☐

☐

Bills, forms & errands

e.g., electric bill, a return, renew a prescription, a form, cancel a subscription

☐

☐

☐

☐

PARK IT (NOT NOW, BUT DON'T LOSE IT)

Admin is the perfect FOCO task: set 10 minutes, make the one call, stop. The dread is almost always bigger than the task.

FOR THE HARD DAYS

The Bad Brain Day Card

Some days the whole system is too much, and that is allowed. On those days, this is the entire plan. Cut it out and stick it on the fridge.

BAD BRAIN DAY

A full win today:

- ☐ One surface cleared
- ☐ One meal (any meal counts)
- ☐ Meds + a glass of water

That's it. You ran the house today.

FOCO · tryfoco.com

& Cut along the dashes and keep it somewhere you'll see it on the bad days.

Wins This Week

ADHD brains run on reward, not discipline. Log the small wins and actually collect the rewards. This page matters as much as the checklists.

Done is done. Proof you did more than your brain remembers.

MY WINS THIS WEEK

☐	_____
☐	_____
☐	_____
☐	_____

"Cleared one counter" is a win. Write it down anyway.

MY REWARD MENU

Pick one after a session. No reward is too small.

Want a body double for the next thing you're avoiding? Start a free FOCO session at tryfoco.com, the app built to help ADHD brains begin.