

FOCO

THE PRINTABLE

ADHD Meal Planner

Eat well without the daily "what's for dinner" spiral. Built for brains that run out of decisions before dinnertime.

Decision-light

Safe foods welcome

Zero shame

READ THIS FIRST

The 5 ADHD Meal-Planning Rules

Meal planning fails ADHD brains when it asks for fresh decisions and effort you've already spent. These rules remove both.

1. DECIDE ONCE, NOT DAILY.

"What should I eat?" every day is dozens of decisions you don't have to spare. Pick from a short set list instead of deciding fresh.

2. SAFE FOODS COUNT.

The same five meals on repeat is a working system, not a failure. Variety is optional. Eating is the goal.

3. GOOD ENOUGH IS THE BAR.

Frozen, pre-cut, and convenience foods are valid. A fed body beats a perfect plan you never cook.

4. EAT ON A TIMER.

Time blindness means you forget to eat until you're running on empty. Set meal cues like alarms, not hunger.

5. PLAN FOR THE LOW DAYS.

Keep a no-cook list for the days you have nothing left. Future-you in a slump needs an option, not a guilt trip.

Fewer decisions. More fed days.

DECIDE ONCE, EAT ALL WEEK

Weekly Meal Plan

Fill it in once. Repeat meals freely. Tick "easy" for the low-effort ones so a tired day still has a plan.

Day	Breakfast	Lunch	Dinner	Snack
Mon
Tue
Wed
Thu
Fri
Sat
Sun

Repeating Tuesday's dinner on Thursday is not cheating. It's the whole strategy.

Go-To Meals & No-Cook Options

Build your set list once. When deciding feels impossible, you pick from here instead of from the entire world of food.

Go-to meals

Meals you can make on autopilot. Aim for 6 to 8.

No-cook / low-spoon

For days with zero energy. Examples to steal, then add your own:

- ☐ Yogurt + granola + fruit
- ☐ Toast + egg or nut butter
- ☐ Cheese + crackers + apple
- ☐ A good frozen meal (genuinely fine)
- ☐ Cereal counts as dinner

Stick this list on the fridge. The point isn't to cook more, it's to never stand in the kitchen at 8pm with no idea and no energy.

SHOP WITHOUT THE WANDER

Grocery List by Section

Sorted by store area so you're not crisscrossing the aisles or re-deciding mid-shop. Write from your weekly plan.

PRODUCE

FREEZER

SNACKS

FRIDGE / DAIRY

PANTRY

DON'T FORGET

One trip, one list, in store order. Buy doubles of your safe-food staples so you never run out mid-week.

Forgot to Eat Again?

When you suddenly realize it's 3pm and you haven't eaten, skip the plan. Just get fuel in, fast.

It doesn't need to be a real meal. It needs to be something, now. Optimize later, eat first.

GRAB-AND-GO FUEL (NO COOKING)

- ☐ A banana or apple plus a handful of nuts
- ☐ Cheese stick, crackers, whatever's fast
- ☐ A glass of water first, you may be thirsty, not hungry
- ☐ A protein bar or yogurt from the safe-food stash
- ☐ Last night's leftovers, cold is allowed

Set three meal alarms today. A repeating cue beats relying on hunger signals your brain doesn't reliably send.

Meal Wins & Cooking Company

Cooking is a task like any other, and task initiation is the hard part. Log the wins, and don't cook alone if starting is the wall.

You fed yourself today. That is the win. Full stop.

THIS WEEK I...

- ☐ Planned meals once instead of daily
- ☐ Ate on a timer, not on empty
- ☐ Used a no-cook option without guilt
- ☐ Did one grocery trip from the list

COOK WITH COMPANY

If you keep not-starting dinner, the block is initiation, not the recipe. Start a FOCO body-doubling session and cook alongside someone, so the hard first step happens with backup.

Start a free body-doubling session at tryfoco.com, the app built to help ADHD brains begin.